

The Bay Malton Greasbrough

The Bay Horse, now a private house, in 2010

David Chadwick was born in Greasbrough in 1807. His wife, Maria, was born in Rawmarsh in 1810. In 1851 David was a labourer on the railway; in 1861 he was a weighman at a colliery. Maria was a widow in 1871 and two daughters were visiting their sick mother. Their eldest son, Joseph, became a blacksmith, firstly in Greasbrough, then in Parkgate and finally, in 1881 and 1891, on Fitzwilliam Street, Swinton. Another son, David, became a fender fitter, living first on Potter Hill and then Coach Road. In 1891 he was a Commission Agent, still living on Coach Road. Finally, in 1901, he was a picture framer.

John Lambert, born 1811, blacksmith and victualler, with a wife and four sons. In 1841 John was living with his wife, Elizabeth, on Greenside. Their eldest son, William, born 1837 was a forgerman in an iron works in Parkgate in 1861. He was a highway labourer in 1871. In both those years he was living in Scrooby Street. By 1881 he'd moved to Mangham Quarry, Parkgate and was a labourer in a coal mine. His wife Elizabeth was the daughter of a retired foot soldier and coal miner, John Hinchliffe. Thomas, born 1842, became a puddler, then a blacksmith's striker. He lived in the village until at least 1881, before moving to Rawmarsh and then Dalton. His wife, Emma, was the daughter of an Irish groom, Richard Fieldsend, who had married a Wentworth girl. Arthur, born in 1847, became a glass bottle blower in Hunslet before running a pub, the Nelson Inn, in Holbeck, Leeds.

William Hawley was born in Greasbrough in 1818. He was primarily a butcher, but was running the Bay Malton with his wife in 1861. After his death, his wife, Ann, continued as publican until at least 1872. In 1881 she was living at No 1 Green Street, with one of her sons, William Allen, who was a butcher. The Old Crown was next door.

Selina Hawley, born in 1849, married a colliery carpenter and raised a large family on Rockingham Road, Swinton.

George Harris Hawley became a railway engine driver, living in Swinton in 1891.

John Hawley was born in 1851. In 1881 he was a publican and colliery banksman at the Bay Malton. He then became a general labourer, living on Fitzwilliam Road, Rotherham, in 1891 and 1901.

William Allan Hawley moved to No 4 Potter Hill with his butchers shop. By 1901 he had moved back to the Bay Malton with his wife and six children (see gravestone).

Rotherham Advertiser 16th August 1902: Public Notice:

SALE BY AUCTION ON 2nd September 1902

Fully Licensed Public House together with Stables and other Outbuildings belonging therein to, and now in the occupation of, Mr W.A.Hawley.

The House contains Bar, Bar Parlour, Bagatelle Room, Tap Room, and Kitchen on the Ground Floor. Club Room, and three bedrooms on the Chamber Floor, and cellars in the Basement.

The property is situate in one of the principal streets of Greasbrough, and the House is one of the oldest licensed public houses in the village, and has been in the possession of the tenant and his family for nearly 50 years.

The Bay Malton by Stubs